

About Tom Everett

A Hillsborough resident and tireless advocate for agriculture, Thomas Everett was a Somerset County farmer his whole life.

Farming for the Everett family began in New Jersey around 1910 when Tom's grandfather purchased the Beekman land in Hillsborough to develop a dairy and grain farm. Over the years, Tom eventually took a leadership role in expanding Ever Lea Farm through innovative agricultural practices.

Tom earned a Bachelor of Science degree from Delaware Valley College in the study of agronomy. In addition to being a busy farmer, Tom wore many hats as an active participant in agricultural government. He served as the first chair for the Somerset County Agricultural Development board, a title he held for twenty-two years; he was a member and president of the Somerset County Board of Agriculture, a member and first vice-president of the New Jersey Farm Bureau, and an active member in the Land Use Committee, New Jersey's Direct Marketing Association, Vegetable Growers' Association, and Grain and Forage Producers Association.

Tom's family: wife, Kris, and children Rachel, Kaitlin and David, supported his great contributions to the farming community, and carry on his legacy in Somerset County.
