Extending control of “Navigable Waters” to claim property rights and reduce private rights.

Senate Bill 787, Clean Water Restoration Act.
The bill intends to simply replace the phrase “navigable waters” with “waters of the United States.” In so doing, it would change property rights back to the founding of the nation, by requiring “every landowner, business, county, and city to obtain a permit to use their water, subjecting them to unconstitutional regulation and discretionary jurisdiction if the Army Corps of Engineers and the EPA.”
